V. Reading Comprehension (20%): Choose the best answer based on the passage.

Questions 1-5 refer to the following passage

Finding love on the Internet is becoming more and more commonplace in today's fast-paced society. While some people do find love in cyberspace, keep in mind that there are potential dangers. Though most people you meet online may be nice and sincere, there are a few who have bad intentions and some can even be violent. Be very careful about giving out personal information to someone you meet online, such as phone numbers, the name of your workplace, and your address. If you decide to meet in person, make sure you meet in a public place. Also, tell a friend where you are going and who you are going to meet. If possible, give them a photograph of the person you are meeting. If you change locations after you meet, give a quick call to your friend to let them know. As they say, it's better to be safe than sorry.

1. Which word means the same as Internet?
 A. aerospace B. cyberspace C. outer space D. inner space
 2. The author calls today's society _____.
 A. advanced B. complicated C. industrial D. fast-paced
 3. Which proverb did the author quote?
 A. It's better to be on the safe side. B. Safety is of primary concern.
 C. It's better to be safe than sorry. D. It's useless to cry over spilt water.
 4. All of the following are safety measures EXCEPT _____.
 A. meeting in a public place B. informing a third party
 C. reserving personal information D. changing meeting places at will
 5. The passage is _____.
 A. a piece of news B. a reminder C. an application D. a warning

日期節次：7 月 30 日 第 3 節 13:30-14:40

科目：英文

In contrast to Asians, Westerners often value individual happiness above family obligations. Westerners may be more likely to choose careers and marriage partners based on how those choices will affect their happiness, rather than what their culture or parents deem more important. There is also less pressure to spend a large amount of money on children's education than there is in Asia.

In the United States the income gap between the very rich and the very poor has been widening over the past 30 years and though most Americans say this is troubling, there is no popular movement to halt it. Harvard scholar Orlando Patterson argues that this apparent lack of concern about income inequalities stems from the fundamental beliefs among Americans that money is not the measure of worth, and those who desire money can get it if they work hard enough anyway. Other scholars argue that Americans simply do not believe the government can change the income gap.

6. When Westerners choose their spouse, _____.
- they take their parents advice into consideration
 - they consider whether the choice will make them happy
 - they think about what their parents consider important
 - they consult experts on marriages
7. Regarding education expenses, _____.
- Westerners face more pressure than Asians
 - Westerners face the same pressure as Asians
 - Asians face more pressure than Westerners
 - Asians feel more relaxed
8. Regarding the income gap, _____.
- people in the US are trying to stop it
 - people can stop it if they want to
 - the government will do something about it
 - the government is incapable of dealing with it
9. What caused the income gap?
- People don't seem to mind.
 - People don't work hard enough.
 - It is the government's fault.
 - Resources are monopolized.
10. The passage implies that _____.
- Americans don't care as much as Asians about how famous or prestigious a university is.
 - Americans wish their government to deal with income inequalities.
 - Americans value money.
 - Americans think a person is judged by how much money he/she makes.
